Somehow the Douglas's had "absorbed the Mar earldom" (a)His sister Lady Isobell Douglas gave him several grants of land to which she had succeeded as heir to her father (b).1387: James passed over his lands of Tillycouly in Clackmannan & Clova in Angus, to his step-father Sir John de Swinton, the transaction being confirmed by King Robert II of Scotland.This action caused Thomas of Erskine to come before the King at Perth in 1390.Thomas's wife, Issabell, had rights over thee lands and he was concerned that they should not be prejudiced. The King agreed with the result that these lands did not pass tp Sir John Swinton's heirs. (a)1388, August: James convinced Sir John to follow him into the field of battle at Otterburn against the English. Sir John appears to have fought under James though chroniclers on the ground appear to have given Sir John more credit for the victory than to his step-son, James, who was slain in the battle. "The younger man [James, Earl of Douglas], in his haste insecurely armed, striking out right and left with his battle-axe, fell early in the frey, unrecognised, borne down by the three lances fixed in his body". (a) At battles end "a mournful band ..... bore his body back across Carter Fell to lay it in the Abbey of Melrose", Roxburgh. (a)James, Earl of Douglas left no rightful heir and so "the wide territories of the Douglasses were divided. .... by an old entail, the Earldom and what should belong to it went to Archibald the Grim, while Cavers went to one of James natural [illegitimate] sons, drumlanrig to another". (a) Perhaps in fear of the possibility of Sir John. Swinton and his wife Margaret of Mar signed an undertaking on 5 Dec, 1389 never to question or contest the rights to Drumlanrig. (1919: the document still existed in the charter-chest at Drumlanrig).On his death some part of his estates went to his sister Isabella (c). | Swint: Ch.1C, Sh.5&6Swint: Ch. 1C, Sheet 3 | Swinton Family Records(a) Scot Hist Review 1919(b) Clark, James Toshach(c) Paul, sir James Balfour1904, p.152-3 |
