703	SWINTON, William	-	I	England	?	(b: c1650's ?) (l: 1680's)	-	-	Bedford, England	William was sexton of St Cuthberts, Bedford. He is described as "a man of very wicked life". He went out of his way to spy on the Nonconformists and Puritans. He "used to watch at nights, climbing trees and ranging the woods by day to search for conventicles". He was evidently stricken with some kind of paralysis and speechlessness. On one occasion he fell from the bell in the steeple-house but escaped. Later he was "suddenly ... stricken and died miserably" (a).	Misc File	Whiting, C.E., 1968, p.436-7.

SWINTON	(b: c1759)	-	-	Swinton, Berwicksh., Scotland Philadelphia, Pennsylv., USA City of Washington, Pennyl., USA	One of the 'Finest Stonecutters in Phila- delphia. He was recruited by B. Latrobe to work on the Capitol Building 1917, May 27: Rambler writes of the Life & Works of George Blagdon in 1808, Jan. 19 that a power of attorney to George Blagdon from "Archibald Swinton of Swinton Co., Berw., Scot., brother Germain of deceased William Swinton, mason of the City of Washington, appoints James Farquier, stonecutter of Philadelphia & George Blagden mason of the City of Washington, attorneys to recover money due & to sell the effects of the deceased". His brother Archibald was most likely an executor of his Will. The 'Congressional Cemetery' was established by a group of Private citizens. The cemetery always had a close association with those people instrumental in building & operating Washington DC. The first interment in 1807 was of William Swinton, stonecutter. In 1816 the cemetery became the unofficial resting place for members of Congress. The bodies of Presidents Harrison, John Quincy Adams, Zachary Taylor were held there pending removal to their home. 1806: William appears as a witness to the will of his colleague James Sharp, Stone Cutter, City of Philadelphia. Onboard the ship the Doctor's wife was too sick to look after her baby. Ann looked after it on the Drs. request & so gained better food, accommodation and facilities. In the tropics William suffered from the heat in his thick woollen clothes, so Ann cut up her linen sheets to make white trousers for him. They disembarked at Belfast (Port Fairy, Vict., Aust.)(1) travelled overland to Warrnambool; (could read & write & came of his own accord.) (on ship - 414 passengers, 3 adults & 10 children died during voyage)

1556										1888: Business changes to William Swinton & Sons: ran branch shops in South Warrnambool, West Raglan Parade, Cudgee, Nullaware & Wangoom.
1557										1903: 3 small shops owned by W. Dimock, on the western side of the shop were bought out. These shops were remodelled & used for the extension of the drapery dept.
1558										After William's death son Robert Swinton took over the management of the shop and sons John and George Swinton were taken into the partnership.
1559										1905, Apr. 28: A Mrs T. Russell was bought before the Warrnambool Police Court for an order "for £2/9/10 for goods sold and delivered" (b).
1560										1926: The business was again expanded: the premises east of the original site were purchased and the whole shop front modernised. The grocery expanded into the new section. (5)
1561										In addition to the grocery, the business merchandised hardware, furnishings and tailoring, dressmaking and millinery were carried on.
1562										1931: business became "Swintons Universal Providers"; trading hours were 8am-6pm.
1563										Bartered produce was bought back from the outlying farms. They leased 3 large stores in Merri St. from the railways. These were later destroyed in a momentous fire.
1564										Later this farm produce side was later sold to the Western District Co-operative. In addition to its own branches the firm ran a wholesale section from its Timor St. shop supplying many other small independent shops in the district.
1565										In late life Ann & the sons ran the business while he read.
1566										He had one trip back to Scotland by steamship through the Suez Canal. During the trip he was served "Tomatoes" for the first time. On his return he told Ann about the new vegetable & not to buy them as he did not like them.
1567										1934: With William Swinton Jnr dead, Robert & John decided to sever their connection with the partnership. Roy Swinton (William Jnr's son) took over the grocery, hardware & grain dept.
1568										George Swinton, with sons Frank & Keith took over the drapery, crockery & Furniture dept.
1569										The firm was also the local agent for H.V. McKay Massey Harris farm machinery.
1570										SWINTON STREET, Warrnambool is named after him:
1571										had land there where the shop horses were rested.
1572										Died from Cerebral Haemorrhage aged 70(2)
1573										Buried Warrnambool Cemetery.

There was also a wall down the middle of it, so to get to the other side you had to go outside. The boys evidently slept one side & the girls on the other. When all his children had died they were paupers & everything was sold to pay their debts. After the war he again worked with his father but a satisfactory partnership could not be worked out so in 1947, Oct. 23 the business (Swintons Furniture) was sold. Then he worked as an insurance agent before opening his own furniture business at Beverton, Ontario. He ventured into road construction in Western Canada. For a while he was a male attendant at a hospital for the mentally retarded in Orillia. He was active in the Church & Royal Canadian Legion affairs. He had been an accomplished athlete. His marriage ended with divorce and then he went to live in Sydney, Australia on his war disability pension. 1992: on his death his remains were flown home from Sydney to be buried in Orillia. He was born into slavery in South Carolina/ 1880: He was a farmer 1893: Wilson took his family to Liberia, Africa on an emigration scheme that cost $100. When they returned to Africa, the tribe they descended from would not accept them back so they were made to work as slaves in a Gold Mine. While working in the mine Wilson managed to steal 3 containers of gold by eating them, and later when they were retrieved he hid them. 1896 The family escaped with 2 or the containers of gold and returned to America hidden below deck, on a cattle boat, until they were out of sight of land. During the voyage one of their children (Jessie) was born. Back in America the family moved to Blackwell, Arkansas where Wilson bought 240 acres of land. They raised cotton, corn & peanuts. They also sold timber from the land to make wood shingles for homes and businesses. Before his death Wilson had acquired a total of 500 acres.
